EXHIBITION

Jenny Wheatley's artistic practice is deeply influenced by her personal experiences and emotional connections to specific places and moments in her life. Her evocative use of colour is central to expressing her feelings and perceptions, bringing a vibrant and emotive quality to her work. She combines meticulous drawing, keen observation, and the collection of objects and ideas directly from the locations she visits, crafting a rich foundation for her art.

Jenny's process is defined by her constant use of a sketchbook, where she captures both visual and written impressions of the places, people, and atmospheres she encounters. Painting on location in oils or watercolours allows her to immerse herself in her surroundings and directly engage with the surfaces and textures she portrays.

In her studio, Jenny transforms these experiences into composite paintings, working in acrylic, watercolour, or a combination of mediums. Her works aim to distill the essence of a mood, an idea, or the simple joy of a place's character and atmosphere. Through her mastery of colour and composition, she invites viewers to explore her emotional responses to landscapes, relationships, and environments.

Jenny's work has been widely celebrated on prestigious platforms, including the Royal Academy, the Royal Scottish Society of Painters in Watercolour, the Royal West of England Academy, and various London art fairs. She has been a finalist in numerous London art prize exhibitions and has exhibited internationally, earning her a respected place in the global art scene.

Her artistic journey has taken her to diverse and remote landscapes, such as Ladakh during a joint British/Indian army expedition in 1987 and across the Pacific in 1988 on a sponsored voyage documenting the transition from Polynesia to Melanesia. Most recently to Egypt and along the Nile. Jenny's contributions to the art world extend beyond her paintings; she served as a judge on two series of Channel 4's popular Watercolour Challenge.

Her work is held in public and private collections worldwide, including those of the Queen Mother and the Queen. With a commitment to annual solo exhibitions since her graduation, Jenny Wheatley continues to make a profound impact on the art world through her skill, passion, and dedication.
